CHAPTER VII—THE SMALLWHED FAMILY. In a rather ill-favored and ill-savored neighborisosi, though one of its rising grounds bears the name of Mount Pleasant, the Elfin Smallwed, christened Bartholomew, and known on the domatic learth as Bart, passes that limited portion of his time on which the office and its contingencias have no claim. He dwelle in a little marrow street, always solitary, shady, and sad, closely included on all sides like a tomb, but where there yet ingens the stump of an old forest tree, whose favor is about as fresh and natural as the Smallmeand sunct of youth.

restorie about as fresh and natural is the reason as a few as the reason of the first property of the first property of family for several generations. Little old men and momen there have been, but no child, until Mr. Smallwood's granding there, now living, became work in her intellect, and fell (for the first time) into a childish state. With such infantine graces mad a total want of observation, memory, understanding, and interest, and an eternal disposition to fall askeep over the fire and into it, Mr. Smallwood's granding the ferrile.

canding, and morrors, and and into it, Mr. Small to fall askep over the fire and into it, Mr. Small wood's grandmother has undoubtedly brightened the family.

Mr. Small wood's grandfather is likewise of the party. He is in a helpless condition as to his lower, and nearly so as to his upper limbs; but his mind is unimpaired. It holds, as well as ever it held, the first four rules of arithmetic, and a certain small collection of the hardest facts. In respect of ideality, reverence, wonder, and other such plantaciogical staributes, it is no worse of than it used to be. Everything that Mr. Smallweed's grandfather ever put away in his mind was a grab at first, and in grat at last. In all his life he has rever head a single butterfly.

The father of this pleasant grandfather of the neighborhood of Mount Pleasant, was a horry-strained two-lenged, money-getting species of spider, who span webs to calch unwary flee, and der, who span webs to calch unwary flee, and created into looks suntil they were corrupped.—

The name of this old pagan's god was Compound Interest. He lived for it, married it, died of it. Netforg with z very heavy loss in an horiest it enterprise in which all the loss was intended in his beam on the other side, he broke something—a string necessary to his existence, therefore a beam on the other side, he broke something—a string necessary to his existence, therefore to domin's beye been his heart—and made an other strengths and the land them as a character was not good; and he land been bred at a Chiff'ty School, in a complete course, according to question and answer, of plete course, according to question and answer, of these ancient people the Amorite's and Yitties; it was inequently quoted as an example of the tailow of effectation.

His epint shout through his ron, to whom he had made a clerk in a sharp scrive was frequently quoted as an example of the tailow of effectation.

His epint shout the had made a clerk in a sharp scrive life, and marrying late, us his father had done before him, the tool the house of Smallwood, always early to go out, and that to manny has strengthened itself in its practical shaneler, has discarded all amusement, discountenanced all amuy-books, fairy tales, ficture, and fables, and banished all levines whatsoever, ilease the gratifying fact, that it has no child born to it; and that the complete little men and women whom it has produced, have been observed to hear a likeness to old monkeys with a medicing depressing on their minds.

At the present time, in the dark little parlor cathan feet below the level of the atreet—a grim, and, the catha fact below the level of the atreet—a grim, and, the hardest of insize table-cavers, and the hardest of insize table-cavers, and the hardest of insize table-cavers, and the fardest of insection tea-trays, and offering in decorative and, incomin patter, only ornamented with the cours of of heize table-covers, and the hardest of itent-inc tea-trays, and offering in decorative character no had allegorical representation of Granulather Smallweed's mind-seated in two thack horsehoir porter's chains, one on each side of the fire-place, the supermunated Mr. and Mrs. Smallweed whe away the rosy hours. On the stove me a counte of trevets for the pots and kettles which it is Grandfather Smallweed's usual occupation to watch, and projecting from the chinney press between them is a sort of brass gallows for pressing which is also superintends when it is in action. Under the venerable Mr. Smallweed's seating which is also superintends when it is in action. Under the venerable Mr. Smallweed's teat, and guarded by his spindle legs, is a drawer on his chun, reported to contain property to a finitudes amount. Beside him is a spare cushion, anth which he is always provided, in order that he may have something to throw at the venerable partner of his respected age whenever she makes mallesion to money—a subject on which he is particularly sensitive.

And where's Bart's Grandfather Smallweed inquires of Judy. Bart's twin sister.

He ma'z come in yet," asys Judy.

'It's his ten time, ma't it ?"

'Ko."

'Blow much do you mean to say it wants ilow much do you mean to say it wants "Ten minutes." "Hey?"

"Ten minutes."

"Hey?"

"Ten minutes."—(Lond on the part of Judy.)

"He?" says Grandfather Smallweed. "Ten minutes."

Grandoncher Smallweed, who has been mambiling and shahing her head at the trevets, hearing figures mentioned, connects them with money, and screeches, like a borrible old parrott without any plurage, "Ten ten-pound notes!"

Grandfather Smallweed immediately throws the control of the quiet? says the good old man. The effect of this act of jaculation is twofold.—It not only doubles up Miss. Smallweed's head against the side of her porter's chair, and causes her to present, when extricated by her grand-daughter, a highly unbecoming state of carp, but the notes any exertion receits on Mr. Smallweed it most, whom it throws back into his porter's chair, like a trothen puppet. The excellent old gentleman being at these times, a more clothestag with a black stullscap on the top of it, does not present a very animated appearance until he has undergone the two operations at the hands of his grandrangliter, of being slinken up like a great botter, and poted and punched like a great botter. Some indication of a nuck being developed in them by these means, he and the sharer of his life's even in again six fronting one another in their two porters' chairs, like a couple of sentinels long forestice on their posts by the Black Sergeant Death.

Death.

Judy the twin is worthy company for these associates. She is so indubitably sister to Mr. Sinallweed the younger, that the two kneaded into one would hardly make a young person of average proportions; while she so happily exemplifies the before mentioned fauntly likeness to the monter tribe that, attited in a somehal robe and can the before mentioned family likeness to the mon-key tribe, that, attired in a spangled robe and cap, see might walk about the table-land on the top of a barrel-organ without exciting much remark as an amount specimen. Under existing circumstances, however, she is dressed in a plain, spare gown of courts stuff.

constant specimen. University of the answer short is to the source should be delighted as the source of convex stuff.

July never owned a doll, never heard of Cincletella, never played at any game. She once or twace feel into children's company when she was about ten years old, but the children couldn't get on with Judy, and Judy couldn't get on with them. She seemed like an animal of another species, and there was instinctive repugnance on both sides. It is very doubtful whether Judy throws how to laugh. She has so rarely seen the imag done, that the probabilities are strong the other way. Of anything like a youthful laugh, she certainly can have no conception. If she were to try one, she would find her teeth in the way; modeling that action of her face, as she has unconwoodly toucheled all its other expressions, on her pattern of sordid age. Such is Judy.

And her twin brother couldn't wind up a top for his life. He knows no more of Jack the Girant Küller, or of Sinbad the Sailor, than he knows of the people in the stars. He could as soon play a laugh-bog or at circket, as change into a cricket, or a frog houself. But he is so much the better off than his citer, that on his narrow world of fact an opening has dawned, into such broader regions as lie within the ken of Mr. Guppy. Hence, his scientralian and his emulation of that shining enclassers.

July, with a gong-like glash and chilter, sets one of the sheat-iron ten-trays on table, and irranges caps and sancers. The bread she puts on an irrange caps and sancers. The bread she puts on iron tendent; and the butter (and not much of it) in a small powter plate. Grandfather Smallweed looks but other than the capital for the plate.

"Charley do you mean ?"

This touches a spring in Grandmother Smullweed who, chuckling as usual, at the trevets, cries—"Over the water! Charley over the water! Charley over the water, over the water to Charley. Charley over the water, over the water to Charley. Charley over the water, over the water to Charley. Charley over the water, over the water to Charley. Judy, with her brother's wink, shakes her head, and pursess up her mouth into No, without saying it.

"No ?" returns the old man. "Why not?" "She'd want sixpence a-day, and we can do it for less," says Judy.
"Sure?"

Judy answers with a nod, of deepest mean

On this severe matron, as she returns to her talk of seeing up the bitter and cutting the bread, fills the shadow of her brother, looking in at the window. For whom, knife and loaf in hand, she opens the street door.

"Ay, ny, Bart!" says Grandfather Smallweed.
"Here you are, bey":
"Here I am," says Bart. "You girls are more trouble than you're worth, balt"

Here You are, hey?"
"Here I am," says Bart.

"Dining at his expense, pair."

Small node again.

"That's right. Live at his expense as much as you can, and take warning by his foolish example. That's the use of such a friend. The only use you can put him to," says the venerable sage. You are an old pig. You are a brimstone pig. You're a head of ewine!"

Judy, not interested In what she has often heard, begins to collect in a besin various tributary streams of tea, from the bottom of the teapot, for the little charwoman's ovening meal. In like manner she gets together, in the iron bread-basket, as many outside fragments and worn-down heels of loaves at the rigid economy of the house haaled in existence.

"But your father and me were partners, Bart," says the old gentleman; "and when I am gone, you and Judy will have all there is. It's rare for you both, that you went out early in life—Judy to the flower business, and you to the hum. You won't want to spend it. You'll get your living without it, and put more to it. When I am gone, Judy will go back to the flower business, and you'll still stick to the how."

the people have heard him advocate his system of toninge duties for harbor and river improvements.

It were almost a sufficient answer to the Senator, as addressed to the Democracy, that in all of the large majority, (some 38) of his own party in Congress, Mr. Douglas could only get 7 votes in favor of his project!

Then too, it should be enough to cause any western man to look with suspicion upon any pretended favor of Mr. Douglas towards Harbor ad River Improvements, that, although he was as unscrupulous as man could well be in making false statements, he did not venture to deny that Mr. PIERCE is opposed to appropriations of the kind-He gave as a reason for the numerous votes of Mr. Pierce against them, the fact that he represents a state in which the Democracy are opposed to such appropriations. Further than this; as an argument in favor of his system of tonnage duties, he cited the fact that for a series of years (and that from the opposition of the democracy, recel-lect) there has been but one appropriation by Congress for Harbors, and the probability (certainty, if Pierce is elected) that there will be no more here-niter. We recognize in this a judgement by confession, by an authorized person, of all that we have charged the democratic party with, in the way of determined opposition to River and Harhor Improvements.

Mr. Douglas spoke of the "scurrilous attack nade upon him in the Senate by old Truman Smith." This language was very well in keeping with the rest of his dignified speech, and the Schator gave his waistband an extra hitch, and took three exim strides on the platform as he used We don't at all wonder that Mr. Douglas was offended at Taustan Smith's speech. That speech was a most masterly expose of the modus operandi of the Illinois Senator's project. It showed how utterly absurd that project would be in practice, and how cererely it would bear upon the western farmer. Upon this latter point, Gen. Cass expressed his entire concurrence with Senator Smith. And how could it be otherwise with any sensible man? If vessels loading at Chicago or Milwankee are to be charged with tonnage duties at every port between their place of clearance and Buffalo, the price of freights must rise of course. And if it shall be so that the rates of freights hence to Monroe, Buffalo increase with the course of years, dealers n produce here cannot pay as much as they now do by just the difference in freights. Let us take an illustration in the case of two lots of flour, one starting from Chicago, and another from Detroit, and arriving in the New York market on the same day. The consumer pays these townage duties," says Mr. Douglas, Simple Senator !--Does he expect that the New York consumer, or If the flour is exported, the foreign consumer, will

The U.S. Senate did not believe in any such doctrine, and rejected Mr. Douglas' project by a most decisive vote, knowing full weil, that, for every cent of tax levied for these improvements the farmer would have to suffer. The truth is that this scheme is a cunningly devised plan of the Senator from Illinois to please Southern Anti-Harbor men by going against such appropriations, and then excuse himself to his own constituents by pretending to have found some better plan for Sennter Douglas on the Stump.

The notice that the "little giant" would adlress the People of Milwaukee at the Market Hall on Tuesday evening drew a large crowd to the appointed place of meeting; Whigs, Democrats and Free Soilers all desiring to know what arguments could be offered to induce Western men to vote for Franklin Pience. It was fair to presume that Senator Doronas would make out as strong a case in favor of Mr. Pleace as circumstanes permitted, so that Whige went to hear him in the full expectation of having their faith and principles subjected to a severe test, while Democrats attended in the confident belief that they would be furnished with unanswormble arguments in support of their cause and candidate. Both classes of heavers, however, came away disappointed. Mr. Douglas neither confo nor confirmed the Democrats. On the contrare Whig who heard him, but came away strengthened in his determination to vote for Wiffield Scorr, and proud of the faith that was in him, while many a Democrat went home resolving that, if Mr. Douet as was an authorized exponent of democratic dectrines and messures, they would promptly cut their connection with that party. Mr. Douotass is a man of unquestioned ability, but he is, at the same time, an unscrupulous demagogue and an upprincipled politician. His speech on Tuesday night, was well enough, perhape, for a low grade of stump oratory, but utter-ly unworthy of a man who holds a seat in the U. S. Senate. His abuse and detraction of WINFIELD Scott, a man who has rendered his country more signal service than STEPHEN A. DOUGLASS ever dreamed of; his gross and unpardonable misrepreaccusations against the Whig party, his "progressire" ideas of taking Cuba, Mexico and the topies of the Campaign: ing for Canada till it was willing to come; his la-bored pettifogging of the Internal Improvement | Columbus, question; and the radical tone and red Republican sentiments of the entire address, added nothing to Mr. Douglass' reputation as a speaker, and Berlin, an sentiments of the entire address, added nothdamaged the cause he professed to sustain. It Oshkosh, is a fair question, indeed, whether his speech did Green Bay, not win two votes for Gen. Scorr, where it made one for Mr. Prence; since he proved, clearly nd to Congressional Appropriations for River and Harbor Improvements. One case in point came Shafter. nder our personal observation. A resident Walworth County, and a democrat at that, called n at the Sentinel Office, about 9 o'clock Tuesday night, to say, that he had come in purposely to car Douglas; that he had heard him, and was to much disgusted that he quit the Hall, resolving subscribe for the Sentinel and support Score!

The Free Democrat thus sums up its notice of Ar Doublas' speech:

From its opening to its close, there was not one manly or generous sentiment—nothing to excite humanc and noble feelings, or to inspire to high and virtuous deeds—nothing tending to cultivate kind and faternal sympathies; but, throughou, the speech was interlarded with appeals to old prejudices, rivalries and hates, adapted to kindle animosities, to inflame the minds of the people with the love of war and conquest and the lust of gain, and to make them hate each other. To us it was a disgusting exhibition of the lowest demagogueism, with no discussion of the vital questions at issue before the country, while in all the higher elements of oratory it was utterly wanting. It will do the party and the cause of Pierce no good. We look upon all such exhibitions as tending to degrade the minds of our youth, and to teach them the arts of the demagogue instead of the duties of an Anotican citizen. Such speeches may be adapted to Illinois, but Mr. Douglas mistook the character and intelligence of a Milwaukee audience. The Pierce orators here would be ashamed to repeat many of his statements in public. Mr Douglas' speech:

Canadian Reciprocity.

The Canadian Government, having fulled to cajole Congress into passing a bill which shall admit Canadian produce into free competition with our western grain, has, it seems, resolved to adopt a retaliatory policy. In consequence of this Mr. Young, the Commissioner of Public Works, has sent in his resignation to the Governor General,-

He says in his letter : Whatever might be the advantages of reciproci-ty in trade with the United States, for greater ad-vantages would result to Canadian comperes, by opening the St. Lawrence, abolishing Agricultural duties, arranging for a reciprocal trade with Brit-ish West Indies, and constructing a canal to con-nect the St. Lawrence with Lake Champlain, than could result from any retainatory policy against the United States. Such a retainatory policy canand the establishment of an aggressive policy be-tween the two countries, while it may be pro-ductive of other immediate and remote evils, and will, in my opinion, be subversive of the vast in-trense of trade which would follow the policy l

Mr. Young sees as far into a millstone as most people. The privilege of passing their produce free of duty, through the New York Canals, is an ample equivalent and more to the Canadians for that of passing American produce through the Welland and other canals, and our John Bulls on this continent will find that they will not get on any faster by their retaliatory duties and tolls, than they did by fair promises.

Lately a crowd of the regular democracy was was called together at Louisville, Ky, to hear "distinguished speakers." When it was found that this Mr. Brown was the hero of the evening the people refused listening to him. The Louisville Courier says:

He endeavored for several minutes to make himself heard, apparently acting up to the words of the song, "It will never to to give it up so Mr. Brown," but was hooted down and had to give up in despair, and finally withdrew in a hurry. May or Speed and Chas M. Thruston, Esc, appealed to the crowd in his behalf, but it was all of no avail. Gen. Not a. Party Question.—A friend who has traveled a great deal through Indiana and Illinois since the nomination of General Scott, brings us the most encouraging accounts of the way "things are working" in those States. He tells in anusing incident which occurred in a stage coach in Illinois. A whig and democrat had been discussing the free trade question until both got pretty warm, when the whig became satisfied that his opponent was an obstinate fellow, who would not be convinced of his error, and put an end to the dispute by proposing a vote on the Presidency. "Gentlemen," said the whig, "you who are whigs will say 'aye," and you who are democrats will say 'no." "Stop" says the democrat, "that's not the way to put it. You must take the vote as between Scott and Pierce, for I'm a democrat, but I'm going for Scott, my neighbor, here, is a democrat, but he's going for Scott, too; and the fact is, we've concluded in our section, not to make it a party question." It is hardly necessary to say that the vote of that stege load was unanimous for Scott.—Chicago Journat.

Calunder Mill.—A few days since a party met for Scott.—Chicago Journal.

CALUMET MILL.—A few days since a party net at Messra. Huyssens in Calumet to view their extensive improvements, and inspect their new Flouring & Grist Mill.

This mill has been recently erected on the lake shore near the village of Calumet; it is a massive structure of stone, the interior being fitted up on the most approved principle, and in the most substantial manner. The machinery is driven by two powerful engines built by Messra. Turton & Sercomb of Milwaukce, which, in the breadth and strength of their proportions, the truth and finish of their several parts, and the impressive power of their silent but energetic action, reflect great credit on their talented makers.—Fond du Lac Journal.

Anornea Change or Tone.—The Boston Transcript, which has been widely quoted in the Loco remarks as follows upon the address issued by the small coterie of Massachusetts men, calling themselves a "State Convention":—

"Notwithstanding the eloquence and ingenuity lavished upon this address, the prevailing sentiment is, that it can be of very little avail out of Masanchusetts, in arresting the popular tide of enthusiasm which is setting in from every quarter for Scott and Graham. We look to see the Webster men yet coming to the support of what must be admitted to be, "the regular Whig Komination."

Wate Nomeration.—The whigs of this Assembly District have nominated Mr. G. Farnam for the Assembly. Mr. F. is every way worthy the confidence of the whig party, and will no doubt draw a strict party vote. We hope he will not take it to heart however, if he should get nicely flogged; we wont.—La Crosse Times.

Good Srock.—A. M. Hanchett Esq. of Hanchettville exhibited to us on Saturday last, a bull calf, five months old, which weighed 551 and a half pounds. The stock is a mixture of Durham and Devoushire. We think that can hardly be beat.—Medison Democrat.
